

Rule 4005(c)*(1)(i). Introductory Statement.

Standard interrogatories in personal injury and product liability cases in forms hereinafter reproduced shall be utilized in the appropriate cases.

It is not required that all of the said interrogatories be used in every case, and it shall be the obligation of counsel to designate properly those to which answers are required.

In the ordinary case, the Court will not consider favorably objection to the standard interrogatories and parties who file such objections will be subject to sanctions including imposition of counsel fees.

If answers are not timely filed, the procedure for compelling them shall be in accordance with local practice and the appropriate Rules of Civil Procedure.